FROM THE PRINCIPAL'S DESK

American Education Week is November 13th-17th. This is always an exciting week for schools that take this opportunity to showcase students' work and the creative approaches that are used in schools today. A visit to your child's classroom goes a long way to say that you support and encourage your child's educational program.

This is also a time to make observations about your child's performance in the classroom. Since report cards will be sent home on November 20th, and conferences for parents will be held on November 22nd, you may want to collect information that may help you better understand the classroom instructional program. Write down questions and make an appointment with the teacher to discuss them. Now is a perfect time to be sure that your child has made a great adjustment to school this year!
